The background of the cover is a dark, textured surface with a pattern of light-colored hexagons and lines. The hexagons are of various sizes and are arranged in a way that creates a sense of depth and movement. The lines are thin and white, forming a network that connects the hexagons. The overall effect is a modern, geometric design that is both visually appealing and functional.

The background is a dark gray field with a pattern of thin, light gray lines forming a grid of squares. Overlaid on this are several white-outlined hexagons of varying sizes. A large, solid orange-red shape, resembling a stylized 'L' or a corner of a square, is positioned in the upper right quadrant. The text is arranged in a list format, slanted upwards from left to right.

In 2018, Union-Endicott School District offered the Unified Basketball Program for the first time in school history.

Unified Basketball is a branch of The Special Olympics, where there is a mix of special needs students and general education students playing basketball together. In the basketball games, there are 3 special needs students and 2 general education students on the floor playing together. The main goal of the program, is for the general education students to form and create bonds with the special needs students, and not just on the court, but in school and on an everyday basis. The long term goal is to empower this group of Unified Basketball players to help change the culture in our school, so that the special needs students could and would be accepted just like any other student.

If it wasn't for Andrea's "Don't take No for an answer" drive and persistence, UE would not have offered Unified Basketball.
